Report of	CHIEF CONSTABLE
Subject	GIFTS AND GRATUITIES
Date	TUESDAY 28 MARCH 2023 10:00 – 12:00
Author	D/SUPT RICH WARD – HEAD OF PROFESSIONAL STANDARDS

Purpose of Report

1. The purpose of this report is to inform the Panel of details in respect of the Force and OPCC Policies and Procedures for Gifts, Gratuities and Hospitality.
2. Registers will be submitted from both Force and OPCC.

Recommendations

3. It is recommended that members note the contents of the report when considering the Gifts and Gratuities Registers.

Background

4. The hard work, commitment and kindness demonstrated daily by the police officers and staff of Leicestershire Police is well recognised. It is therefore understandable that individuals or organisations may wish to express their gratitude to departments or individuals by offering a gift or a gratuity. Indeed, within the private sector, it is common business practice for customers and stakeholders to receive gifts and / or hospitality as part of negotiations or business transactions.
5. As a guiding principle, police officers and staff should not accept the offer of any gift, gratuity, favour or hospitality, when doing so might compromise their impartiality or give rise to a perception of such compromise. The police officer or staff member is therefore expected to interpret the 'intention behind the gift or hospitality' and assess not only whether it is likely to compromise their position, but also whether it could be perceived as such. The member of staff will have to consider the degree of lavishness of a gratuity or hospitality, its relative value, the industry norm, and the extent to which the gratuity or hospitality is connected to the business in question. The existence or otherwise of previously offered or accepted gratuities or hospitality may also be relevant. Of course, they complete this assessment with the awareness that a refusal to accept such an offer may cause unnecessary offence or might hinder productive working relationships. Where doubt exists, advice from the Professional Standards Department should be sought.

6. The Leicestershire Gifts and Gratuities Procedure originates from the ACPO (now NPCC) Guidance on Gifts, Gratuities and Hospitality (2012) and is designed to protect staff by providing a register for both accepted and declined offers of gifts and gratuities. The register provides a transparent record and enables a common-sense approach to be applied regarding the retention, approval or disposal of all such offers.
7. As a minimum, entries will include the nature of the offer, the surrounding circumstances in which the offer was made, the estimated value of the gift, gratuity or hospitality, and whether permission to accept any such offer was sought or granted. Such authority should be sought from a supervisor.
8. The register is published, with some redaction of officer name and rank, upon the Force website biannually. Declarations that are not required under the terms of the Force policy are removed from the register prior to publication.
9. The types of gift most regularly offered by members of the public to police officers are chocolates, biscuits and alcohol. The Gifts, Gratuities and Hospitality Procedure are currently silent upon the specific receipt of alcohol as a gift.
10. In respect of advertisement of this Policy & Register there is the following in place:-
  - Advertised on the Counter Corruption Unit Website
  - The Gifts & Gratuities Policy is on the Force Document Library
  - Information is also contained within the Police Service Volunteer Policy (Document Library)
  - The Register is displayed on the Force external Website
  - This risk area is discussed and explained during training inputs to new joiners and existing staff when they attend specific training courses e.g. custody Sergeants, CID Course etc.

1. Introduction

- 1.1 The public expect the highest standards of integrity from all members of staff. It is vital that police officers and police staff act with honesty and integrity and that they are seen to be impartial at all times.
- 1.2 This procedure provides police officers and police staff with an ethical framework in which to determine the boundaries of acceptability around gifts and hospitality and how the acceptance of gifts or hospitality can undermine personal and professional integrity. It also aims to reinforce the importance of preventing allegations of corrupt practices or improper relationships with any member of the public or corporate body arising from the offer or acceptance of any gift, gratuity or hospitality.
- 1.3 The procedure provides police employees with definitive detail and examples on the boundaries of acceptability and non-acceptability, and makes clear the distinctions that exist between an act which would constitute a breach of the criminal law (Bribery Act 2010) and low-level hospitality which could in no way be considered as a breach of integrity.
- 1.4 The responsibility for determining the acceptability or otherwise of any gift, gratuity and hospitality are matters for the Counter Corruption Unit.

2. Background

- 2.1 The publication in December 2011 of HMIC's report 'Without Fear or Favour' on its review of police relationships provided the police service and the public it serves with reassurance that there were no endemic failings in police integrity. At the same time, the review found evidence of a lack of clear boundaries, checking mechanisms, governance and oversight of procedures for the approval of gifts and hospitality.
- 2.2 HMIC made 6 principal recommendations and highlighted a further 23 considerations on specific matters which, when acted upon, would put the service in a stronger position to instil and further improve public confidence in police integrity and to improve its ability to prevent and deter the infrequent incidents of corrupt practices that cause significant adverse reputational damage, particularly when attributable to or involving senior leaders across the service.
- 2.3 This publication forms the basis of this procedure and through its implementation will bring about consistency across forces nationally.

3. Key Principles

- 3.1 Police officers and police staff are subject to the Standards of Professional Behaviour, chief amongst which is that which relates to honesty and integrity. This standard specifically states that police officers and police staff are honest, act with integrity, and do not compromise or abuse their position. It further clarifies that police officers and police staff should never solicit the offer of any gift, gratuity, favour or hospitality in any way connected to or arising from their role within the police service, whether on or off duty.
- 3.2 As a further guiding principle, police officers and police staff should not accept the offer of any gift, gratuity, favour or hospitality as when doing so might compromise their impartiality or give rise to a perception of such compromise.
- 3.3 Offers of a gift, gratuity or hospitality vary widely according to the circumstances and will range from readily identifiable examples of criminality (such as a breach of the Bribery Act 2010) through to instances of entirely appropriate and reasonable extension of gratitude and common courtesy which do not amount to any suggestion of any breach of integrity on any party.
- 3.4 The provisions of the Bribery Act 2010 contains two general offences covering the offering, promising or giving of a bribe (active bribery) and the requesting, agreeing to receive or accepting of a bribe (passive bribery) at sections 1 and 2 respectively. The provisions of the Act extend the definition of bribery to include seeking (or agreeing) to bring about improper performance of duties, which includes a public function such as policing. Improper performance amounts to any breach of an expectation that a person will act in good faith, impartially, or in accordance with a position of trust. Staff should also be aware of offences under section 6 of the Act in relation to bribing foreign public officials.
- 3.5 The Act does not prohibit reasonable and proportionate hospitality and promotional or other similar business expenditure intended to improve the image of a commercial organisation, to better to present products and services, or to establish cordial relations. It is, however, clear that hospitality and promotional or other similar business expenditure can be employed as bribes. Considerations in this regard will include the degree of lavishness of a gratuity or hospitality, its relative value, the industry norm, and the extent to which the gratuity or hospitality is connected to the business in question. The existence or otherwise of previously offered or accepted gratuities or hospitality may also be relevant.
- 3.6 At the other extreme, during the course of their duties in the community, police officers or police staff may well occasionally be offered gifts or hospitality which does not in any circumstances amount to any breach of integrity on the part of either party. Examples of such include the provision of light refreshments as a common courtesy in line with policing duties, inexpensive promotional products from partnerships or conferences, or discounts aimed at all members of the wider police service (eg, advertised discounts through police publications).
- 3.7 Similarly, bona fide, unsolicited and inexpensive gifts of thanks from members of the public or victims of crime may be offered to individual officers or teams in genuine appreciation of outstanding levels of service. Offers of such gifts or hospitality could cause concern for an officer or staff member as to whether they can be accepted or not. Guidance in relation to this is outlined in section 5 below.

- 3.8 Police officers and police staff should be aware that at times a refusal to accept such an offer may cause unnecessary offence or might hinder productive working relationships. Equally, to accept such an offer may be misinterpreted and could lead to inaccurate expectations of favour or service. Where doubt exists, advice from the Counter Corruption Unit.
- 3.9 On the occasions it does not prove possible to tactfully refuse or return any offered gratuity or hospitality, the recipient should ensure an entry is made in the force register of gifts and hospitality as detailed in Section 5 below.

4. Register of Gifts and Hospitality

- 4.1 The Register of Gifts, Gratuities & Hospitality is under the direction and control of the Head of Professional Standards, who will ensure scrutiny, auditing and governance of the Register in line with wider corporate governance of matters of integrity and counter corruption.
- 4.2 As a minimum, entries will include the nature of the offer, the surrounding circumstances in which the offer was made, the estimated value of the gift, gratuity or hospitality, and whether permission to accept any such offer was sought or granted. Such authority should be sought from a supervisor.
- 4.3 Declarations of offers of gifts, gratuities or hospitality irrespective of whether accepted or rejected by the recipient should be made to ensure integrity. Exemptions from any requirement to record extends only to those instances of impromptu and unforeseen provision of light refreshments in line with policing duties, inexpensive promotional products from partnerships or conferences, or discounts aimed at all members of the wider police service.

5. Considerations

- 5.1 The following considerations should assist police officers and police staff in determining the boundaries of acceptability of any gift or hospitality. These lists should be considered as comprehensive but not exhaustive.

In order to make what is acceptable more memorable, the acronym GIFT has been devised:

- Genuine: is this offer made for reasons of genuine appreciation for something I have done? Why is the offer being made, what are the circumstances, have I solicited this offer in any way or does the donor feel obliged to make this offer?
- Independent: Would the offer or acceptance be seen as reasonable in the eyes of the public? Would a reasonable bystander be confident I could remain impartial and independent in all of the circumstances?
- Free: Could I always feel free of any obligation to do something in return? How do I feel about the propriety of the offer? What are the donor's expectations of me should I accept?
- Transparent: Would I be comfortable if my acceptance of this offer was transparent to my force, colleagues, and to the public or was reported publically? What could be the outcome for the force if this offer was accepted or declined?

5.2 To assist police officers and police staff in applying a consistency of approach, the following cases provide additional guidance.

5.3 A gift may be accepted if it is:

- Of a trivial or inexpensive nature (for example, diaries, calendars, stationery or other small items offered during a courtesy visit or conference).
- A small commemorative item from visiting overseas law enforcement or governmental agencies or similar organisations.
- Bona fide, unsolicited and inexpensive gifts of thanks from members of the public or victims of crime may be offered to individual officers or teams in genuine appreciation of outstanding levels of service.
- Alcohol may be accepted if it is inexpensive and given as a thank you from a member of the public/partner agency.

All such offers of gifts should nonetheless be subject of a declaration in the force register. Click here for the Gifts, Gratuities and Hospitality Form

5.4 A gift should not be accepted if it is:

- From external contractors or companies tendering for work with the force or wider service.
- Cash payments (other than donations to specific police charities or police supported charities).
- A financial reward resulting from the publication of articles relating to the intended recipient's role or duties as a member of a police force.

All such offers of gifts should nonetheless be subject of a declaration in the force register. Click here for the Gifts, Gratuities and Hospitality Form

5.5 A gratuity may be accepted if it is:

- An offer or discount negotiated through the Police Federation, The Superintendents' Association, or other staff association or trade union
- A discount to public service workers including members of the police service offered on the basis that the organisation in question has a large customer base and of a trivial or inexpensive nature (and the force has given explicit approval for such an offer)
- Free travel arrangements for officers and staff on active duty if approved and formally negotiated through the force

5.6 There should be no requirement to declare any such gratuity in the force register.

5.7 Gratuities which amount to individual gain from a points scheme when purchasing items or fuel are not acceptable, eg, when refueling a police vehicle at a supermarket petrol station and using your own in store reward / loyalty card to collect the points. Force loyalty cards are permitted; however, the accumulated points must not be used for personal gain by an individual or team. Items such as furniture and equipment may be purchased for individual departments providing the purchase is for the good of the organisation.

5.8 Hospitality may be accepted if it:

- Extends to the impromptu provision of light refreshments during the course of policing duties
- Is a conventional meal provided during the course of a working day by another police force or partner agency in either law enforcement or community safety, for example attendees at meeting, seminar or conference organised by an external body. In either case there should be no requirement to declare any such gratuity in the force register.
- However, should the hospitality entail a conventional meal provided in accordance with the recipient's duties such as; the annual dinner of a representative association, private company or local authority which are limited to isolated or infrequent occasions and can be demonstrably in the interests of the force to attend, then the recipient should declare this in the force register.

If you are in any doubt as to the acceptability of an item you have received as a gift or as a gratuity, you should err on the side of caution and decline the offer or discuss that matter with the Counter Corruption Unit before accepting.

5.10 Hospitality will not be acceptable if it:

- Amounts to regular free or discounted food or refreshments whether on or off duty.
- Includes a degree of lavishness which is outside of the industry norm or is beyond any sense of common courtesy or reasonableness.

All such offers of gifts should nonetheless be subject of a declaration in the force register. Click here for the Gifts, Gratuities and Hospitality Form

5.11 Breaches to the procedure:

It should be noted that any breaches to this procedure may amount to a breach of the Standards of Professional Behaviour for both Police Officers and Police Staff and may result in action being taken in line with local Misconduct Procedures.

5.12 Reporting Concerns

If you become aware that a colleague may have breached this procedure, you can report via Bad Apple or alternatively and in line with the Whistleblowers procedure, you should report to either a manager or direct to the Counter Corruption Unit.
